

Car rental Oujda — eastern gateway & OUD airport

Oujda serves the east; useful for Saidia beaches and routes toward Nador. Hashkarat Maroko: popular with Hebrew-speaking travellers exploring Morocco.

A quieter city with lively evening streets. A rental car is the practical way to reach Saidia beaches or continue west toward Fes. Being closer to Algeria than to Marrakech, Oujda has a distinctly eastern-Moroccan character — its cuisine, dialect and market goods lean toward neighbouring Algeria and Tunisia in ways that feel noticeably different from the cities further west on this network.

This guide is prepared for visitors of Hashkarat Maroko (hashkaratmaroko.com).

City guide

- Place du 16 Août
- Saidia beach day
- Medina markets
- Sidi Yahya oasis just outside the city
- Roads toward Nador

Angads Airport (OUD) pickup available. Summer heat is dry — keep water in the car. Card acceptance is patchier here than in the bigger tourist cities, so carry more cash than you might elsewhere in Morocco. Book via Hashkarat Maroko to lock your preferred car.

Highlights

Oujda Ramparts & Medina

Oujda's old town is enclosed by defensive ramparts dating back to the 12th century, rebuilt several times since as the city changed hands between different ruling dynasties. Inside, the medina is smaller and quieter than those further west, with everyday markets rather than a tourist-focused souk.

Evenings are the liveliest time to walk the medina and the streets just outside it, once the day's heat has passed.

Lalla Meriem Park

A large, shaded public park near the centre of Oujda — a straightforward, relaxed place for a walk or a break from driving, with none of the crowds of a major sightseeing stop. It is popular with local families in the evening, especially once the summer heat eases off.

It sits close enough to the city centre to fit easily into a short stop in Oujda on the way to or from Saidia's beaches.

Good to know

A little history

Founded in 994 by Ziri ibn Atiyya, chief of the Zenata Berber Maghrawa tribe, Oujda became a military and trading crossroads from its earliest days thanks to its position near the Algerian border. Passed between the Almoravid, Almohad and Marinid dynasties and later contested between Morocco and the Ottomans, it was only definitively secured as Moroccan territory at the end of the 17th century — its walled medina still reflects that long, contested history.

Local customs

- Dress modestly, especially at religious sites and in more traditional neighbourhoods.
- Ask before photographing people directly, especially women.
- Hagglng is expected in souks and markets; fixed-price shops and restaurants are not negotiable.
- A tip of around 10% is customary at restaurants; small tips for guides and porters are appreciated.
- Friday is the main day of prayer — some businesses close or reduce hours around midday.
- During Ramadan, avoid eating, drinking or smoking in public during daylight hours out of respect.
- Alcohol is available at licensed hotels, bars and some restaurants, but not sold everywhere — public intoxication is frowned upon.
- Driving is on the right; seatbelts are mandatory, and traffic already in a roundabout generally has priority.

Emergency information

- Police: 19 (from any phone)
- Gendarmerie Royale (rural areas / highways): 177
- Fire & ambulance (Protection Civile): 15
- Highway emergency (Autoroutes du Maroc): 5050

For anything involving the rental car itself — breakdown, accident, or any question at all — call or WhatsApp us directly first; we're reachable and can usually help faster than a general hotline. Keep your embassy or consulate's contact details with you separately; Moroccan emergency operators may not speak English.

- Al Farabi Hospital — Hospital
